The Penguins, who won the Stanley Cup last year, have kept their hopes of repeating alive by slaying two of the best teams in the NHL in the first two rounds. But they enter the Eastern Conference finals beat up and held together more by sheer will and determination than anything else. ... The Senators clearly have something special going this spring, thanks to their fiery coach, inspirational goalie and a trap that has successfully frustrated nearly every team they've played. ... The series features the best player on Earth (Sidney Crosby) and the best defenseman on Earth (Erik Karlsson). That alone makes it must-watch. ... Karlsson has been terrific this postseason, and conference finals stage should give the Swede even more of an opportunity to shine. He has 13 points in 12 playoff games, while playing nearly 29 minutes per game. No other defenseman has reached double digits in playoff points.

In many ways, the Ottawa Senators are the antithesis of how a Stanley Cup contender should be built. They haven't bottomed out for a shot at a top draft pick. They have no regular players on rookie contracts, but they do have a 32-year-old defenceman signed through 2021. They traded a touted prospect for aging depth help and a good young centre for an older one. They missed the playoffs in two of the past three seasons.

Prediction:

The Penguins are looking to make it back to their second straight Stanley Cup Final, while the Senators are looking to make it back to the final for the first time since 2007.

Erik Karlsson is the x-factor in this series. Karlsson is playing with a hairline fracture in his foot, but continues to show why he is considered to be one of the best defenseman in the NHL. Slowing down the Ottawa captain will be a necessity for the Pens.

After watching the Penguins play in Game 7 against Washington, they look poised to make another run for the cup. Penguins in six.
