FOSDEM23 Collab Dev Room Tiki Session

Following an informal meeting (with Jean-Marc and Roberto) we decided a generic discussion/presentation about markdown would be more “collaborative” than the usual “here are the new things in tiki” talk, but with the opportunity to mention tiki 25 if there’s time.

Related: TikiFestFosdem2023

FOSDEM page and video recording is here
Presentation slides are here and the wiki page is here

The Relentless March of Markdown

And its arrival in Tiki 25

Abstract

Following GitHub’s adoption and “flavouring” of Markdown in 2009, many other major projects such as Reddit, Stack Exchange have followed suit, even WhatsApp now uses it to add formatting to your instant messages. That’s mainstream!

Tiki has long wished for a common wiki markup language, starting with involvement in Wiki Creole and inclusion of PEAR Text_Wiki adaptors since 2010? we started integrating markdown and now, in Tiki 25, offer it as an alternative syntax in all text areas, such as wiki pages, blog posts, comments and so on. In future versions Markdown will become the only active syntax.

Say hello to Tiki Flavored Markdown

I started an event on the FOSDEM site provisionally titled "The Relentless March of Markdown"

New Toys in Tiki 25

[+]