I am a software engineer from Germany normally working with J2EE, ie. JSPs, Servlets and EJBs. In my spare time I administer the web server of a game clan I am a member of. I have been searching for a nice integrated clan site system and tried quite a few, among which are typo3, phpnuke and postnuke. We use tiki at work for an internal technology portal to collect informations, so I gave it a try and I can say I really like it!

It's got some minor flaws yet but so far it's the best I've met.

I would love to actively contribute work to this development but there's so few time left... At least I will try to keep an open eye on things I experience.
