

Building your own menus

The Tiki application menu is automatically populated with the features that you have enabled and where the user has the right permission to access. But in some cases you don't want to use this menu because you don't like it or you want options in a different order, or something. Tiki incorporates a menu-builder tool where admins can create menus that can be used in Tiki for whatever you want, links to special sections of the site, links to external sites, any link can be used and there are three different menu-types that can be used. Read about this tool in the admin section of this manual: Menu builder.
